Gail Davis:
'Annie Oakley'

as we see it

Small things can be terribly annoying —a lone mosquito in a bedroom, a pebble in a shoe, a speck of dust on a movie projector, a loud television commercial.

On a number of occasions we've asked TV station managers and chief engineers why the commercials between programs must be so much louder than anything else on TV. The answers have been extremely vague.

"It's up to the engineer at master control," we've been told. "There's a difference in sound levels between a network show and a local commercial, and unless the engineer is very careful, the commercial comes out much louder."

The exact reason why viewers' ears must be blasted from time to time—and always with commercials—still is not clear. It is evident that TV volume can be controlled by stations. It is also evident that many stations don't give a hoot about controlling the volume. If they did, they'd control it. Radio stations are faced with the same problem, but their engineers are not asleep at the switch or under instruction to let commercials go out at higher volume than anything else.

It's a small matter, but an extremely annoying one to viewers. Perhaps the question of how loud commercials should be is too small to warrant attention by the Federal Communications Commission. Perhaps the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters' TV Code Committee has bigger things on its mind.

We submit, however, that viewers are bothered more right now by loud commercials than by subscription television, color, VHF-vs.-UHF battles and all the other big matters before the FCC and the NARTB.

The Man Who Bet On Television

Hal Roach, Jr.'s Plunge Has Made Him The World's Biggest TV Producer

Forty-one years ago a young movie bit-player named Hal Roach invested $100 in a rented camera, a little film and a few actors. He called himself a producer and produced what shall generously be called a comedy.

A short while later he met an actor named Harold Lloyd. They made a comedy called "Lonesome Luke" and sold it for $850.

Forty-one years later, Roach's son bought out his father's entire holdings for a reported $10,000,000 and established himself as the world's leading producer of TV film.

den (Margie); James Lydon (Hollywood); Charles Farrell (Margie); Reed Hadley (Public Defender); Cesar Romero (Passport to Danger); Bill Bishop (Life); Douglas Dick (Waterfront).

What happened during those 41 years is a story unique in movie annals. Hal Roach, during the rough and raucous infancy of the motion picture industry, was a free-wheeling giant of his time. He originated the "Our Gang" comedies. He introduced Harold Lloyd, a giant in his own right. He fathered the Laurel & Hardy comedies and the Charlie Chase epics. He discovered the famous film comediennes Mabel Normand and ZaSu Pitts.

Roach today sits behind a rough-hewn desk in an office with a curious flavor of the past—walls laden with old-time photographs, floor strewn with bear rugs. "I just sit here and loaf," he admits amiably.

Not 30 feet away, in an adjacent office, sits his 36-year-old, 230-pound son, sole owner of Hal Roach Enterprises. In 1939, while his father was producing what was to be his last picture, Hal, Jr., had just attained the imposing title of co-director on a picture called "One Million B.C.," with Victor Mature and the late Carole Landis. It is still seen occasionally on TV, a thought that gives young Roach the heeby-jeebies. "To think," he says, awe-struck, "that a picture like that could need a co-director!"

Ten years later ("I let him get his experience on someone else's payroll," his father admits), Hal, Jr., came back to his father's studio to announce that television was the coming thing. His father, forward-thinking to the point of being ahead of his time, agreed. But that was about the only thing they agreed on. Junior wanted to turn out profitable half-hour films in a hurry. The "old man," then only 58, saw TV as embracing formats of an hour or longer. "Big shows," he insisted. "Get away from the radio formula. Sell 'em the way magazines sell space—two and three sponsors on the same show."

That Junior Was No Idiot

Five years later NBC announced its "revolutionary" magazine concept, its 90-minute "spectaculars"—big shows with two and three sponsors.

But in 1949 TV wasn't ready for the big show. In 1951, Junior and his father made two hour-long films, "The Three Musketeers" and "Hurricane at Pilgrim Hill." Both are still sitting on the shelf.

Junior, meanwhile, borrowed money and plunged into his first TV film venture, The Stu Erwin Show. Ringing in his ears were the denunciations of many of his father's old friends. They accused him of trying to pull the whole Roach dynasty down around his father's head.

"They all thought I was an idiot," he says, "and it actually helped. Left me with nothing very serious to live up to."

Over a period of six short years, Junior has become what is perhaps the most prolific TV film producer in the world: My Little Margie, Racket Squad, Public Defender, Duffy's Tavern, Trouble with Father, Passport to Danger and the upcoming Sonja Henie Show. He has eight new shows in various stages of preparation, ranging from initial script to finished pilot. And on his sprawling, 18-acre lot are produced such other shows as Life of Riley, Waterfront, So This Is Hollywood, Amos 'n' Andy, You Are There and It's a Great Life.

Roach studios: movies put builders to work,

"Quality," Junior says, "has got to be the keynote. Give 'em good entertainment and you stay in business. But it's not the movie business. It's an entirely different proposition."

Junior, whose easy-going manner

Roaches, father and son: they ▶ pose with TV star Reed Hadley.

but TV is making the lot into a bonanza.

belies a tremendous capacity for work, is not one to delegate responsibility. He services sponsors himself. He makes frequent and unannounced visits to the seven soundstages (two more are building). "I've got to see if they're working. Or if they're not working. And if they're not, why not."

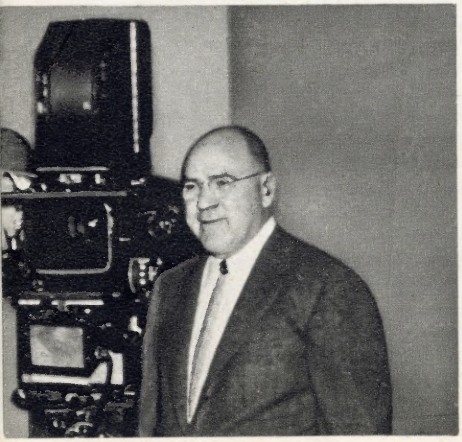
Senior, now 63, fought many a battle with his son before finally giving in and selling out. "The 'old man' had his bitter moments," an associate says, "but he's funny. Once the decision was made, he was happy. He's a lot prouder of Junior than he lets on."

If Senior is more given to hunting and fishing these days, his mind is still looking ahead to TV's future.

"Stars can't last," he says flatly. "We need twice as many and more. Big stars will finally come to the point of doing only 10-minute bits on a big show. Ethel Barrymore used to do it in vaudeville. Got $1750 a week for it—and that's darned near $5000 as money is counted today.

"Advertisers have a lot to learn. Why should a half-hour show be confined to a single beer sponsor? He makes his point with his first commercial, if he knows what he's doing. Doesn't have to repeat it. So get a soap sponsor in there for the ladies.

"And they're not selling right. They're in your living room. What would happen to a door-to-door salesman who popped his mouth off to a housewife with one of those ridiculous jingles or catchwords they're using? She'd brain him."



But Senior is going fishing. Junior owns the store. And in an unobtrusive-looking annex flanking the administration building and surrounded on three sides by a small, immaculate rose garden, live two ladies well into their eighties. One is Senior's mother. The other is her sister. And they've lived there for 30 years, free.

"This way," says Mrs. Roach, "we see the boys so much more often."

And every afternoon at 5:30 they avidly watch what is now the highest-rated multi-weekly TV show in Los Angeles—the old "Our Gang" comedies. It's been quite a wheel, and it has come full circle.—Dan Jenkins

The Other Liberace

GEORGE IS THE ONE WITH THE FIDDLE

As far as musical talent is concerned, Liberace, the piano player, and George Liberace, the violin player, apparently are equally endowed. If anything, George probably knows more about music than does his younger brother.

Yet there is a fantastic difference in the amount of adulation heaped upon them by a doting public. It is to brother George's credit that he couldn't care less.

"I've been through the stardom bit," he explains, almost paternally. "I had my taste of it back in the days when bands were a big deal and I was with a big band. Now Lee is enjoying it. Heck, I don't have time to be a star.

"Besides," he adds thoughtfully, "we didn't have television in my day."

To the casual observer, George Liberace might appear to be going along for the ride on Liberace's rather flamboyant coattails; but the casual observer would be missing the boat by several country miles.

"I didn't start working with Lee,"

George says solemnly, "until 1947. Up to that time he couldn't afford me."

Back in 1936, when Lee was only 15, brother George was masterminding Bonnie Baker's "Oh, Johnny" record, a fabulous best-seller at the time. He had skipped from his job as first violinist with the Milwaukee Symphony to a top spot with the Orrin Tucker band—a move his long-hair friends likened to the Waldorf's headwaiter becoming a drive-in car-hop.

After touring all the plushier night spots, George left Tucker to become road manager with Ada Leonard's all-girl band. Came next a World War II stint with a musical organization on Guam, followed by considerable roaming with Anson Weeks. Then in 1947, he decided that Lee had become a sufficiently strong drawing card to pay him, George, a decent stipend as musical director.

Actually, it was what George had wanted all along, the Liberace family being even more tightly knit than the Rover Boys. George and his wife, Jayne, live in Van Nuys, just 15 minutes from brother Lee's place, but there is no violin-shaped pool.

Liberace and George today are equal partners in a $1,000,000 concern known as Liberace Enterprises. George handles music selection, business details, lighting, the Bel Canto Publishing Co., the payroll—and the violin.

The only time he doesn't talk is on the show itself, a bit that started quite accidentally back in 1947 during their nightclub appearances. Liberace would say, "And I want you to meet my brother, George." George, who was invariably getting something ready, would turn to the audience just long enough to toss out a brief smile.

"Heck," he says today, "I never had time to talk. Too busy. And it sort of caught on as part of the act."

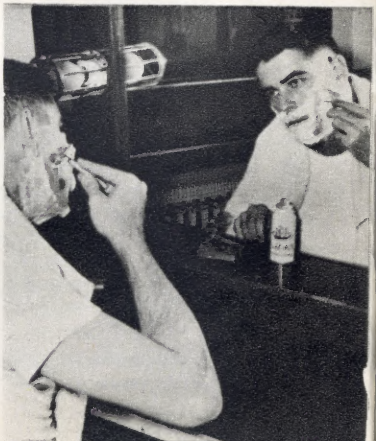
Now 45 and bearing a marked resemblance to his renowned younger brother, George is serious, direct, affable—and not without a sense of humor. The ashtray on his desk is a miniature piano, a promotion gimmick extolling the virtues of—surprise!—Lawrence Welk and His Band.

Liberaces—pianist and violinist—duet beneath painted likenesses.

Busy Bill Hobin pauses for lunch.

He's Found A Home On TV

He sleeps and shaves on the job.



Busy 'Spectaculars' Aide Eats And Sleeps In Studio

Bill Hobin has found a home on TV—literally. As associate producer-director of all the Max Liebman "spectaculars," Hobin sleeps, eats, shaves and brushes his teeth at NBC's Brooklyn color studios during the three days preceding each colorcast.

Bill doesn't do this by choice. He'd much rather go home to his family in Scarsdale, N.Y., but he can't spare the time.

During these final days of rehearsal, it's Hobin's job to set up and coordinate all the camera shots. He's a busy fellow—conferring with Liebman, dashing in and out of the control room, shouting across the studio to the conductor, the sound effects man, the announcer, floor managers and cameramen.

When all this is done, he goes to sleep on a cot in the corner.

"My big worry," he says, "is that one of these nights a watchman is going to step on my face."

He helps wardrobe woman fix singer's hem.

Miller

Chicago Dateline

Chicago's perennial TV rivals, Tom Duggan and Howard Miller, are gunning to beat each other to network exposure. Tom is angling for a place in ABC's national lineup while Howard is out to sell CBS on a 30-minute network stanza. Both shows would originate from Chicago.

Last month Miller persuaded CBS to invest $8000 to make a kinescope of his proposed opus, a variety show featuring an actual cutting of a record on camera. Singers Felicia Sanders and Julius La Rosa and orchestra leader Mitch Miller flew in to stage the show with Howard. The "kinnie" is being closely scanned by New York brass.

Meanwhile, "Red" Quinlan, WBKB's aggressive boss, arranged to have Duggan's new Saturday night variety show reviewed by top ABC executives. The program, to be presented on Ch. 7 at 9 P.M. each Saturday, will be beamed to New York at regular intervals via closed circuit. ABC has already sent a VIP to Chicago to confer with Tom.

Who will be Kukla, Fran and Ollie's summer replacement is a toss-up. Leading contenders at present are Chicago's "Uncle Win" Stracke and a Detroit TV personality.

Ex-Chicago fiddler Florian ZaBach paid a flying visit home last month. His TV film series, carried by WGN-TV this season, will return in the fall.

Robert E. Merriam, defeated candidate in the recent mayoralty race, may concentrate full time on producing TV shows. He's mapped out a documentary series of crime "exposes."

Another noted crime investigator, Tennessee's Sen. Estes Kefauver, will step before the Chicago TV cameras Saturday—as a guest on Sheriff Joseph Lohman's WBKB teleshow.

Don McNeill, stymied in efforts to return the Breakfast Club to TV, has purchased video and radio rights to the best-seller, "How to Live 365 Days a Year." He plans a regular weekly series based on the inspirational book.

Chuck Bill's folksy early-morning musical stanza, Crazy Acres, switches to the 4 P.M. time period June 20.

Pat Buttram, Gene Autry's bewhiskered comic sidekick, reins into town Monday. He'll do the live lead-ins and closings on WBBM-TV's Gene Autry weekday show. Pat replaces vacationing Val Sherman for three weeks.

This five-months-old lion cub was born in Chicago, but we'll see many of his African cousins during our African film safari.

DESTINATION: Africa

By Marlin Perkins

On July 19, a hardy band of Chicago television people will join me in one of TV's most ambitious projects: a Zoo Parade safari to Africa. Accompanying us will be a small army of our North American animals such as de-scented skunks, bald eagles and tough armadillos. We'll use them as trading material in our visits to African zoos.

The objective of our Zoo Parade safari is to film a half-dozen shows for use in our fall series. We plan to return sometime next October via the North Pole flight route. Our itinerary will span some 25,000 miles in all.

Presently we are swept up in a storm of preparations for the trip. We will film complete programs overseas, which means we must pack sound equipment as well as cameras. Two of our cameramen are already in Africa to film background footage at Nairobi, Kenya, and South Africa's Kreuger National Park.

Our cameras are rigged with 16-inch lenses to allow us to capture animal close-ups from two city blocks away. We will need these special cameras in filming such subjects as the lost herd of elephants at Addo, the unique Port Elizabeth snake farm and the rare white rhinos of South Africa. We will also have underwater cameras to record scenes of hippos in action. Out in the African bush we'll travel by jeep and armored vehicles, using planes for longer trips.

I guess the most painful part of our preparations are the shots. All Zoo Paraders will take 12 shots for seven different diseases—typhoid, paratyphoid, typhus, tetanus, smallpox, cholera and yellow fever.

So far, none of our brave crew has fainted, and that includes myself, Jim Hurlbut, our producer Don Meier, our writer Dorothy Ruddell and our unit manager Earl Harris.

One more thought—we still need American bald eagles to present to foreign zoos as good-will symbols. If you know where any of these rare birds are available, write or call me at the Lincoln Park Zoo, Chicago.

Heinie the chimp is one animal we won't trade overseas. He's a Zoo Parade favorite.

June From Down Under

MISS MYERS IS A LUSCIOUS TAH-MAH-TOE

About the pleasantest thing that's happened to Chicago television this past season is a tall, lissome, green-eyed brunette named June Myers. June is one half of the team enlivening WBKB's new chatter-and-interview show, Daily Double (5:30 P.M., Monday through Friday). The other half, perhaps not as pretty, is lanky sportscaster Jack Drees.

June is conspicuous not only by glamor but by her odd and lilting accent. Most viewers peg it as English, but curvaceous June actually comes from the "land down under," Australia. She emigrated to America as a teenager little over a decade ago.

The lovely Aussie made her TV debut last October after achieving some success as a model. Her entry came via the Tom Duggan night-time show. Feeling a little like Red Riding Hood entering the wolf's lair, June signed on as a Duggan "Girl Friday."

She was on the receiving end of some ferocious, though good-natured, teasing from Tom about her accent, age, weight, dress and confusion about sports. But, flashing a razor-keen wit, she faced up to Duggan and displayed a marked flair for lively repartee.

"Tom gave me a rather bad time on the show," June recalls, "but off-camera he's a real gent. He was always helpful and friendly."

Claiming she can't sing or dance a lick, June says her ultimate ambition is to become a second Betty Furness, with or without the accent. Meanwhile she continues to make a tidy income from fashion modeling. Highly style conscious, she makes it a point to be smartly dressed whenever on camera. As a result, Daily Double is attracting many feminine as well as masculine viewers.

On the show, June comes in for heavy teasing about her culinary prowess. So it was natural that the ladies should have come to her rescue with a flood of recipes to try on the cynical Jack Drees. The prize, in June's opinion, was a recipe for what she calls "tah-mah-toe" cake.

Actually, like many a career girl, the fetching brunette is by necessity an efficient housekeeper. She's married and the mother of two young boys, David 9, and Paul, 16 months. Young David, she says, far from being impressed by his mother's TV success, prefers to watch her competitor—Gene Autry.

Although pleased and thrilled by her fast rise in TV, June is much more excited over the fact that in just a few short months she will become an American citizen.

Jack Drees and June team up each weekday over WBKB to offer chatter, interviews.

Return of the Lady Wrestlers?

Don't hold your breath—but in just a few short weeks we'll know whether or not burlesque, subtly described as "lady" wrestling, will be seen on Chicago TV screens.

The Illinois State Legislature has until July 1 (the date set for summer adjournment) to act on a bill outlawing female grapplers. Incidentally, they're legal in Wisconsin and Indiana.

If the State Legislature does not act on it before it adjourns, then the recent Illinois Supreme Court decision in favor of the women wrestlers will stand. The justices ruled that the Athletic Commission, which frowned on the ladies, has no authority to deny the women a right to flex their muscles in the ring.

Many local promoters, though silent on the subject, are eager to introduce the mat amazons on TV. One Chicago station is all set to televise them once the legal aspects are resolved.

I'm of the opinion that rowdy women wrestlers are unsuited for a family medium like TV. Their antics complete the mockery of wrestling as a sport.

The Illinois Legislature is also faced with a bill imposing a five percent tax on televised boxing matches staged within the state. Athletic Commissioner Livingston Osborne has long clamored for such a tax. He contends that TV has cut so deeply into the Chicago Stadium attendance that the current levy on the Stadium gate doesn't meet his expenses.

The commissioner has precedent in his favor. Other states such as New York are already benefiting from a TV tax. But nevertheless, it appears that Osborne's bill will be by-passed again!

June's Still "Mrs. Miller"

I would like to know why Howard Miller and June Valli don't wear their wedding bands. Have they called it quits? I hope not because they make a cute couple.—Ted Balio, Harvey, Ill. [Howard and June are still happily married. For professional reasons they don't wear wedding bands.—ED.]

Don't Change "Hosses"

I was surprised to read in your column that WBBM-TV was considering giving Jim Conway's master-of-ceremonies job on In Town Tonight to Irv Kupcinet. I like Jim very much and hope he stays on the show.—Mrs. E. L. Monser, Wenona, Ill.

Clean Up Soap Operas?

Isn't it about time those borderline situations on the daytime serials were cleaned up? If the heroine has to drool over a man, she shouldn't pick one who is married. A lot of housewives like me are getting sick of the lack of respect TV shows for marriage.—Harriett Spoon, S. Beloit, Ill.

Veteran Ringsiders

To settle an argument, can you tell me if weatherman Wayne Griffin ever announced wrestling bouts on TV? I feel sure he did but my husband says no. Also, how long has Jack Brickhouse been announcing them?—Mrs. Dolores Kragelund, Hammond, Ind. [You win the fall in the debate. Wayne was a wrestling announcer in Chicago for many years and still does a wrestling show for a station in Pittsburgh. Jack has been a grunt-and-groan commentator for over four years.—ED.]

Ride 'Em, Cowgirl!

Gail Davis is the hardest-riding, straightest-shooting cowgirl since Annie Oakley—which is a good thing, because Gail Davis plays the title role in Annie Oakley on TV. It would be a sad state, indeed, if she couldn't live up to Annie's standards.

Real Annie: Ohio-born Phoebe Anne Oakley Mozee was a trick-shot artist who died at 66 in 1926.

One recent sunny afternoon at Gene Autry's Melody Ranch, 30 miles removed from Hollywood, a three-year-old golden palomino named Target tossed a 220-pound trainer right on his ear and took off for the hills.

It should be noted that Gail Davis was up on Target herself five minutes later and that she sits a horse like old Buffalo Bill himself.

So much for the base canard that Gail, a 25-year-old slip of a blue-eyed Arkansas girl, rides a gentled-down nanny in her role as "Annie." Target is for real, and so is Gail Davis.

Actually, the trainer-bucking Target is the newest and youngest of three identically colored palominos associated with Annie Oakley and won't appear in the series until the new batch of films hits the air this fall. He is the apple of Gail's eye, for she bought him and owns him herself.

"We broke him in at the big country fair in Houston last March," Gail said, flinching at the recollection. "It was almost the end of both of us. He took one look at all those spotlights in that big arena and promptly broke the track record for the mile and a quarter. He's still got a lot to learn."

For the benefit of the nonbelievers, it should also be pointed out that little Miss Davis can handle a gun right smartly. But she hedges a bit on rating herself as a marksman. "Let's just say that I'd hate to get into competition with those police boys."

Autry, under whose aegis Gail has been metamorphosed into Annie, comments that "Gail shoots very well, and she's getting better all the time."

On her personal appearance tours, Gail, from the back of the galloping Target, lights a series of six matches with well-placed shots from her .22 revolver. "It's really not too difficult," she says. "The faster he goes, the smoother the ride—and at eight or 10 feet, head on, how can you miss?"

She can, however, and does. "I average about four out of the six," she admits frankly. "Once I only lighted one, but let's not talk about that."

Born in Little Rock, Gail took to riding and shooting as naturally as most girls take to playing with dolls. She also developed an early flair for show business, having been named the "Most Beautiful Baby in Arkansas" at age three.

A graduate of the University of Texas, she came to Hollywood six years ago and said, "Hello, there" six times to Van Johnson in "The Romance of Rosy Ridge."

"It wasn't a line you could do much with," she says, "but I did manage to give it six different inflections."

The break came when Columbia Studios gave her a routine assignment in "Cow Town" in 1950—the first of some 15 Autry pictures in which she was destined to appear. Autry had long wanted to develop a cowgirl star, and had been searching for someone who could get away with being Annie.

"There are lots of girls who can ride and shoot and lots of girls who can act, but the girl who could do both just couldn't be found," he says today. "Then this kid came along and I didn't have any more problems."

A star since January, 1954, when the series first took to the air, Gail is up to her ears being a cowgirl and would have it no other way. "I have absolutely no ambition," she says flatly, "to climb into an evening dress and win an Academy Award. So far as I'm concerned, I'm going to be Annie Oakley for the rest of my born days."

As attractive off-screen as she is on, Gail apparently has time only for her work. Until just recently she shared a ridiculously small apartment in Burbank with actress Nan Leslie. This summer, with her family visiting her, she has rented a furnished house. When she isn't actually shooting Annie Oakley, she's shooting rifles and pistols at tin cans out at the Autry ranch, keeping track of her growing wardrobe of some two dozen different cowgirl outfits, touring with the Gene Autry Western Variety Show or making personal appearances.

It's not as dangerous as it all might seem, however. After she had finished the first 12 films in six hectic weeks at the ranch without so much as a sore muscle, she got out of her car at Hollywood and Vine, tripped on the curb and broke her ankle.

"Civilian life," she says, "is not for me. I'm an old cowhand."

An actual daydrama plot: (left to right) a newspaperman is accused of murder, thus must sell his paper to a wealthy dowager who is indirectly related to his wife and is aunt of slain man. Daydramas Or Nightmares?

Read These Soap Opera Plots, Then Judge For Yourself

The term "soap opera" has always been good enough for radio. But the TV networks, apparently taking seriously their own publicity about how TV is a cultural medium, have come up with a new one. Those 15-minute series are now to be called "daydramas." But daydrama, schmaydrama, the plots still accent human misery, so that a housewife viewer can dampen the ironing with her own tears as she suffers through them.

Suicides and murders that would rate time on Dragnet, love affairs that would interest Dr. Kinsey and surgery gripping enough for Medic still comprise the primary script motivations. Apparently, though, that's what the public wants, because the programs draw consistently respectable ratings and sell their sponsors' soap or cereal. In fact, some top TV and Broadway actors and actresses are now doing daydramas (you should pardon the expression).

But as the man said, "The play's the thing." And there's one thing about soap operas, or daydramas: anything can happen—and usually does. Here are a few representative plots that set viewers to weeping.

Plot No. 1. Our hero, discovering the body of a murdered friend, calls the police and his wife, who was once estranged from him. The police and district attorney don't believe his story. The D.A. learns our hero had a stock deal with the murdered man, indicating the hero would benefit from the murder. The D.A. tells police that he plans to force our hero to confess.

The wife, learning that only she and a few of their close friends believe in his innocence, attempts to induce a well-known criminal lawyer to take the case but he refuses. So the wife flies to Washington to see an attorney friend. She talks him into defending her husband. But then it comes out—this attorney had fallen in love with the wife during the time she and her husband were separated.

Now the plot—not to mention the cast and the viewers—are several weeks older. Has the hard-working D.A. solved the case? Of course not. The husband has qualms about taking a lie-detector test and his wife and her attorney-friend fear he might flunk it. But, happy day, he passes. The wife and attorney are now determined to prove his innocence. They gamble on running afoul of the law themselves by slipping past a police guard outside the murdered man's apartment and entering the apartment to search for evidence.

. . . Police trail the accused to rendezvous with widow in slain man's home. Tension starts to mount between the newsman and his wife as attorney reveals newsman has no funds to fight charges. Dowager steps in, offers to pay legal fees if the murdered man's wife will leave for Europe immediately. The title of this show: The Inner Flame.

All this is titled First Love. Then let's go on to the next story.

Plot No. 2. A big-time attorney wants to divorce his wife, who is, as the saying goes, running around. The wife hires a private eye to investigate her new boy friend. The detective calls while the two are together and discloses the boy friend's first wife died from an overdose of sleeping pills. The boy friend, perturbed that the wife doesn't trust him, socks her in the kisser. A doctor comes and tells the wife she has heart trouble.

Now it's two weeks later, and the wife has died under mysterious circumstances. Police tell her husband and his girl friend that she did, indeed, die of sleeping pills administered by someone else. The husband's mother suffers a stroke when she learns of her daughter-in-law's death. His girl friend reports that his wife had demanded that she, the girl friend, scram out of their lives, also before she died. Then the girl friend discovers some sleeping pills are missing from her bottle.

Want to know who did what to whom on Concerning Miss Marlowe? Tune in next week.

Plot No. 3. There's this guy who is being acclaimed because he captured a gang of baby black-marketeers. Actually, he indulges in the same racket himself and turned in the other gang only to get the cops off his own neck. But our hero becomes suspicious and questions him about his motives. One day the hero tells the heroine that he still loves her; next day, the boy friend of the heroine's sister tells her he nevers wants to see her again. She returns to her hotel, finds our heroine asleep and accidentally starts a fire.

The guy who broke up the black-market ring (see above in case you've lost track of him) rushes into the blazing inferno and saves the heroine. But the sister is trapped. Her boy friend, apparently changing his mind about her, tries to save her.

Does he succeed? We're not certain. We tuned in The Greatest Gift next day and found the story line had dropped this bit of action and was now airing the problems of a couple who had adopted one of the black-market babies.—Bob Stahl

REVIEWS

SCIENCE FICTION THEATER

Telepathy: Walter Kingsford, Judith Ames.

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

Although most science-fiction devotees are well past the elementary school level, TV has made little effort to appeal to this not inconsiderable audience, which scoffs at the likes of Captain Video and Space Patrol. The new Science Fiction Theater, about as close to Captain Video as Pinky Lee is to Studio One, remedies this oversight.

What makes this telefilm series outstanding is that its stories, however fantastic, are based on scientific fact. And to insure the show's scientific accuracy, Ziv-TV, the producing firm, maintains a research staff which consults regularly with university experts.

Moreover, the show doesn't permit phony romance to interfere with more intellectual excitement. True, some researcher might have a beautiful girl assistant, but she concentrates on her work without disturbing the plot.

The stories also retain an appealing human touch. For example, when a ship from outer space, trying to visit the earth, is destroyed just short of its goal, is our Army elated at thus escaping a potential menace? Not at all. The authorities regret losing an opportunity to learn from an obviously superior species of life. This particular story dealt with extra-sensory perception. Others have told of a search for a new artificial foodstuff, a visit by residents of a future world, mankind's first flight into outer space. The films, featuring well-known Hollywood actors, are well acted, directed and produced.—R.S.

Way Of The World

Woe: Claudia Morgan played actress losing hearing and husband.

Way of the World, an NBC soap opera, differs from its stablemates in that it tells a new and completely different story in five episodes each week. According to Linda Porter, the show's hostess, it offers "a variety of plays reflecting the emotions and reactions of the world in which we live." Could be, but if so, it's a good world to get out of.

One episode had to do with a group of seemingly nasty people who, in the solitude of Newfoundland after a plane crash, managed to solve all their problems by the time the rescue plane arrived. An actress gave away her mink coat and a man decided to go back and face up to a murder rap.

Another episode concerned two sisters forced to live together. Naturally, the sisters were in "conflict," which is —next to incurable diseases—the meat and drink of all soap operas. But it worked out. It always does. And in just five days.

Performances by skilled players like Kathleen Maguire, Gloria Stroock and Margaret Hamilton help to keep things from getting completely out of hand.—D.J.

FINE TUNING

By Ollie Crawford

Television to carry National Open Golf Tournament from California. This will be a big day for tee-V.

The network is going all the way to the West Coast for the Jack Par show.

All the golf experts will be in this tournament. These are the boys who get out of a trap with ease, if television needed any more trapeze artists. Life Begins at 80, but not with these boys. They can play nine holes in what Jack Benny wishes were his age.

Considering the prizes, this show may be known as "Stroke It Rich."

Television already has I Remember Mama, but this could be called I Dismember Par. They play Cinderella rules—a guy turns into a pumpkin at the stroke of 12. It's a very rich type of show because every performer has a caddy.

At least it will have a new plot for TV—boy meets gallery.

Everybody has been arguing about the state of TV, but it's now in a fairway.

A guy can stir up more excitement by making a hole in one than he could on any other TV show, with the possible exception of Medic.

Alice Is A Girl Named Jeff

SHE'S GEORGE GOBEL'S FIFTH TV BRIDE

Jeff Donnell is a happy girl. For 30 minutes most every week she plays "Alice," the wife of George Gobel, on The George Gobel Show.

"I have loved George," she says without hesitation, "ever since we were on The Saturday Night Review. I was crazy to play opposite him. But they kept telling me he needed a big, domineering woman to play to."

Their eventual union was nothing less than Fate—or at least good luck.

As a film comedienne with 12 years' experience and 48 pictures behind her, Jeff was offered the part of Alice on the first Gobel show last fall, but postponed fictional matrimony for the real thing with screen star Aldo Ray.

"I tried to talk Aldo into postponing our honeymoon," she says, "but he wouldn't hear of it. Naturally, Aldo didn't know George."

By the time producer Hal Kanter got around to Mrs. Ray again, there had been four different Alices—Pat Carroll, Peggy King, Angela Lansbury and Judith Ames. "If I'd been the first," Jeff says thankfully, "they'd have said, 'Let's try somebody else.'"

The real Alice confines her part in The George Gobel Show to tidying up her husband's dressing room on Saturday nights. But the two wives have become friends with a lot in common. Both are domestically inclined and both have children. Mrs. Gobel has three, by George, and Mrs. Ray has two, by a former marriage.

"But Alice," says the TV version, "is—well, I'm more of an extrovert."

The real Alice, moreover, never has to explain her first name. Jeff's tag is in a family tradition of off-beat names. She has an aunt named Frank, an uncle named Phineas and a sister named Do (rhymes with Joe). Jeff was born in South Windham, Me., and grew up in Baltimore (where her father is director of Maryland penal institutions).

A former speech student at Yale, she was brought to Hollywood in 1942

for "My Sister Eileen" by producer Max Gordon, who spotted her in a New Hampshire summer theater play.

Her New England background already has made its contribution to Gobel's salty way with the language. "Fudge said the judge and fury said the jury," which he exclaimed on one exasperated occasion, is an old Rhode Island saying Jeff picked up during a visit to her Aunt Frank and her Uncle Phineas in Providence.

NEXT WEEK: EARL WILSON

WENDELL COREY will play the JEAN HERSHOLT title role in the Dr. Christian TV film series for Ziv-TV. . . A 20th Century-Fox property, "The Number," scheduled as a feature film, will be done instead as an hour-long drama for G.E. Theater. . . Actor PAUL STEWART is turning director to handle the "Kings Row" portion of ABC's dramatic series, Warner Brothers Presents, next season.

Climax! has been renewed and will return next season. Shower of Stars will return, too--though not necessarily as an every-fourth-week alternate to Climax! CBS has already signed JACK BENNY to do six of the Shower shows, which will be comedies written especially for him--one, by F. HUGH HERBERT.

BENNY, incidentally, will continue his alternate Sunday night programs, and has formed his own production company to handle those that are filmed. . . NBC's BOB HOPE will appear on CBS' Toast of the Town June 26 and Arthur Godfrey Time June 28.

WASHINGTON Florence Lowe reports:

That new dark panel bearing the Presidential Seal, seen behind MR. EISENHOWER during televised news conferences, was press secretary JAMES HAGERTY's idea. He noticed that the venetian blinds over the window cast an unruly back shadow. . . WALT DISNEY is receiving full cooperation from the Atomic Energy Commission for his TV series on the history of the atom.

Some executives and engineers sat in on recent planning sessions of the National Committee. Question: Whether to duplicate all the expensive special equipment required at the Democratic Convention in Chicago or try to move it to San Francisco in three days.

Signal Corps tests show that televised courses are generally more effective than conventional methods in teaching basic and technical subjects. Video sometimes cut learning time in half.

Sen. RICHARD NEUBERGER's recent blast against use of prompting devices and make-up by politicians on video has proved unpopular on both sides of the aisle. It's an open secret on Capitol Hill that the TV studios serving Congress offer both aids--and both are heavily used in reports to the home folks.
